It was the proposed contest between Wells and Johnson that stirred up such a sensation in merry old England and came near puting a culetus on the sport in a country. merry old England and came near putting a quietus on the sport in a country that had for hundreds of years the chances are that they have things arranged satisfactorily or they would not take a chance on dropping a bank roll on an uncertainty.

The original plan was to have a big heavyweight tournament in Paris and then have the big fight as a grand finale on the eve of the Grand Prix on June 25. It was arranged to have Georges Carpentier, who has advanced into the light heavyweight class, and Marcel Moreau, another light heavy, meet for the title in that class, on March it Billy Papke and Frank Klaus, both Americans, are to hox 20 rounds for the world's middle-weight title (which, by the way, is impossible, as the weight is not right and neither one holds the American championship), and then in April it was planned to have the winners of these two battles meet for the privilege of meeting Bombardier Wells for the white heavyweight championship of the world (which is again wrong, as none of them has any right to the title in the heavyweight class, except

Johnson may have trouble in getting over to the gay city and then again wells may hold out for such a big sum that it might take the breath away from the promoters in Paris. The fight which would really get the money for the promoters is a Wells-Mccarty clash. That would be a real white championship affair and it would attract more attention than any match that could be made at the present time. It would be a wonderful card in either London, Paris, San Francisco or Los angeles.

For a real champion, Willie Ritchie, bead of the 133-poinders, has been about the quietest thing in the fistic world the past few months, or, in fact, since he annexed the title from Ad Wolgast last fall. The new champion has been doing the vaudeville circuit to the queen's taste and gathering all the loose coin lying around, but he has been careful not to arrange any title match before July 4 next, at which time he says he will be ready to meet any 133-pounder in the world. Who his opponent will be has not yet been decided on; in fact, the Pacific coast promoters are watching the various lightweight aspirants with a view of selecting the best for the big match.

"Knockout" Brown, the New York

feels now that he can win his way to a match with Ritchle. Jack Britten has been hot after Ritchle ever since he won the title and has made offers to the coast boy which Billy Nolan, manager of Ritchie, cannot well afford to tenere.

manager of Ritchie, cannot well afford to ignore.

Tommy Murphy has come back in splendid shape and despite the fact that he has been fighting for the past 10 years, he appears in better condition now for a championship fight than ever before. Tommy is matched with Joe Mandot, the New Orleans hope, at Sun Francisco February 22, and it surely will be an elimination bout for one of them. Mandot is taking a big chance, for should he lose to Murphy he will have little chance of getting a return match with Joe Rivers, his greatest rival for lightweight honors. Rivers and Mandot are even as to wins, each having defeated the other, but Murphy would put the southern boy out of the running should he beat him. Therefore the contest February 22d will be important to both fighting business, and one of the brightest, but even the stars are liable to err at times. When Freddy fought liughie Mehegan, the Australian champion for the title of Great Britain, he claimed it was for the world's championship, basing his claim on the fact that he had defeated Willie Ritchle in Los Angeles before the latter had beaten Wolgast for the crown, and then following with the defeat of Matt Wells, then British champion, and also Hughie Mehegan, the Australian title holder.

Freddy also told how he had once

Wells then British champion, and also bughte Mehegan, the Australian title holder.

Freddy also told how he had once knocked out Ad Wolgast in Milwaukee during a training bout, but that is the point I must differ with him on In his explanation of the tilit with Wolgast in Milwaukee Freddy says: "I had been training for two matches, against Maurice Sayers and Charlie Neary, at Larkin's gymnasium, when one day, after a strenuous workout, a cocky youth, who seemed full of importance, entered the place and after a minute or so, came over to me and said very familiarly, 'Hello, Welsh, how are you?' Fine,' I responded, not knowing his name.

"He followed this up by saying he would give me a couple of rounds, and a told him I didn't care to box that day, giving my reasons. He said, however, he would make a light, friendly go, and to oblige him I put on the gloves. We were to have three rounds. Well, for the first minute we boxed neatly with open gloves and I, having no reason for being suspicious, was taking matters casy. Off my guard, he suddenly swung a haymaker at me with his right. I had just time to step back and it grazed my law, but it revealed to me an attempt to knock me out. I said nothing, but went right in and for the balance of the round it was a real fight. The next round I have a real fight. The next round I was a real fight. The next round it was too impetuous. That was why I always felt confident I could beat to Wolean!" always felt confident I could beat | Wolgast."

Wolgast."

It is true that Weish and Wolgast did have a zetto at Larkins, as stated by Freddy, but there was no knockout. It seems that some of the boys around the place wanted Ad to try out Weish, and the kid went in for all he was worth, and for a time it was a real fight, but Freddy did not knock out the Michigan wildcat. It would sound nice to have the scrap end that way, no doubt, but the fact remains that both were on their feet when the impromptiu bout ended, and it is too bad that Wolgast should have been taken own with appendicitis in Los Angeles when the two were finally matched to fight. is true that Welsh and Wolgast

ONLY 25 BOWLERS REMAIN IN CONTEST

Nearly Every Team in Cactus Lengue is Represented — Cactus Bowlers Matched With Wigwam Rollers. Matched With Wigwam Rollers.

The ax wielded by manager Art Woods, of the Cactus club, has fallen again and chopped off the 42 rollers who were in the contest last week down to In. Nearly every team of the Cactus league is represented, and three rollers from the Industrial were able to make the required total for the third week. The third week of the bag and ball contest statised Monday night with the Elka-Courthouse game and taking the match as an example several of the rollers on these teams will go downfollers on the rollers who are qualified for the second week.

A match between the selected Cactus bowling team and a team from the new Wigwam alleys has been arranged by managers Art Wood and Stafford Campbell. The match will take place on Tuesday night and the regular match scheduled in the Cactus league will be postponed until Thursday, when both the Smelter and the Cactus rollers will start the match at 7.38 sharp, so the women rollers can bowl on the alleys. Thursday night the new tournament of the Smelter league will open with a six club circuit, one match to he rolled on Thursday and two on Friday nights weekly.

EDDIE JOHNSON WINS FROM FRANKIE WHITE AT PUEBLO Pueble Cole., Jan. 28.—With only the slight advantage of 13 pounds in weight, but with a superiority of the fighting game at his command, Eddie Johnson, of Pueble, played all around Frankie White, of Chicage, before a crowd which packed the Pueble Athletic club to suffocation last night, and finally won the match, which was to all intents and purposes, a knockout, in the 10th round. Toward the end of the round Johnson had White going and knocked through the ropes. White staggered back and went at his opponent with open arms. Johnson merely placed a few taps on White's face and the latter dropped to the mat, where he took the count.

There is method in Mr. Ebbets's sudden turn toward tunes. He expects to employ the charms of music to soothe the savage breasts of his fever-lish corpuscled Southern Rifles this season. We are informed by both of the more famous members of the Cobb family—L and Ty—and by other eminent authorities on dispositions and dialects south of the Mason and Dixon line, that there is nothing better than sound to quiet the retaining pulse that might naturally be expected in any true southern bail tosser when he finds himself playing with Brooklyn.

So Mr. Ebbets it setting himself to music.

At the present time the Brooklyn Rebels have practically an all-southern cast. A Yankee has horned in somehow in the person of Cutshaw, but he is excused on the ground that he always hung out south of the slot whenever he was in San Francisco during his Pacific coast league days.

Mr. Ebbets has been quietly populating Brooklyn with Southern leaguers for some time, and he already had quite a stock on hand last season, but during the drafting and purchasing periods he marched right to the sea, clutching the sweetest magnolia blossoms of the circuit. When 1912 closed he was able to line up a team on which only two men conversed with "r's" in their language.

He potted a brace of the crack pitchers of the Southern when he got Atcheson, of Montgomery, and Wagner, of New Orleans. The former was the Southern league leader, and the latter stood third in the percentage table. All Demarce, the Giant recruit, was seend, and McGraw probably just barely beat Ebbets to him.

Atchison was planted at Montgomery for ripening under option. He is a leithander who has been up before. He won 17 and lost 7 games out of 25 appearances. Demarce won 24 and lost 16 out of 34 starts, being just two points behind Atchison at the finish.

Wagner won 19 and lost 8 games for New Orleans, and is said to be a premising youngster. Other Southern leaguers who were on Ebbets's roll when the drafting and buying stopped were James. Williams and Somers, of Nashville. Stongel also came from the Southern hitting 290 in 126 games. He hit 318 in 17 games after coming to the National league last season and will have a thorough trial in 1912.

He is credited with exercising an option on an outfielder who spells his name with a couple of "e's," and who put in 1912 with Sioux City, of the Western league. This Meyers hit for 336 in 162 games, and stole 41 bases. One "Babe" Myers a Toronto outfielder, and a mighty good one, too, is also supposed to be the property of the Flatbush magnate. This Myers hit 342 in 134 games, and stole 48 bases.

 Claude Cooper, the young outfielder who will have a trial with McGraw this spring, was drafted from Bort Worth, of the Texas league, by the Boston Nationals, and McGraw apparently bought him from that club. He is said to be extremely fast, and fast young men are the kind that make a hit with the Glant chief. Claude will be closely inspected.

 George Stallings will have a whole flock of young catchors this year, but will probably retain but three. He has Bariden, a great backstop, but a very week hitter, and Hank Gowdy, the former Glant as his veterans. Hunkus hit 211 last season, and he always could throw. Then Stallings drafted and bought half a dozen others. His best prospect is Drummond Brown, a roungster from Happy Hogan's Vernon club, of the Coast league.
